

NEW MEXICO WOMEN'S CULTURAL CORRIDOR

JUDY CHICAGO MABEL DODGE LUHAN AGNES MARTIN
MARIA MARTINEZ GEORGIA O'KEEFFE MILLICENT ROGERS

Through the Flower, a nonprofit Feminist art organization, is located in the historic New Mexico railroad town of Belen, on I-25 south of the Albuquerque airport.

Founded in 1978, by Feminist artist Judy Chicago, Through the Flower's mission is to educate a broad public about the importance of art and its power in countering the erasure of women's achievements.

Hundreds of thousands of people have viewed the internationally recognized art exhibitions created by Judy Chicago with hundreds of skilled volunteers. Through the Flower sponsored, toured, and cared for The Dinner Party, a monumental work symbolizing the contributions of women to Western history and now permanently installed at the Brooklyn Museum of Art; the International Quilting Bee, hundreds of small triangles honoring individual women; the Birth Project, 85 needleworked images celebrating birth and creation; the Holocaust Project: From Darkness into Light, fusing photography, painting, and glass in a feminist exploration of the Holocaust; and Resolutions: A Stitch in Time, re-interpreting traditional proverbs as new global maxims in needlework and paint. Founding artist, educator and author Judy Chicago has written and lectured extensively about her innovative artmaking and teaching.

Through the Flower presents small exhibitions at its headquarters and at additional locations in Belen. Please call for details. In addition, visitors may watch DVDs and videos about the art created by Judy Chicago with communities of volunteers, and about her studio teaching methods. Publications are available for browsing and purchase. Art Conversations present noted speakers in an informal setting.

Public hours are Monday–Thursday, Friday by appointment. Programs are held on Saturdays. To confirm hours and upcoming programs, call 505-864-4080. Admission is free; donations are appreciated.

Discover the wealth of imagination invested in New Mexico by women of timeless talent. Travel the New Mexico Women's Cultural Corridor through Belen, Albuquerque, Santa Fe, Abiquiu and Taos in search of the achievements of Judy Chicago, Mabel Dodge Luhan, Agnes Martin, Maria Martinez, Georgia O'Keeffe and Millicent Rogers.

The New Mexico Women's Cultural Corridor is presented by Through the Flower. Through the Flower is dedicated to fostering the understanding of Feminist art. We do this by documenting, preserving, exhibiting and sharing the studio teaching methods of pioneer Feminist artist Judy Chicago and the study archive of her work owned by Through the Flower. We stand for the values expressed in her art: cooperation, recognition, creativity, empathy and diversity.

TAOS

Mabel Dodge Luhan

Mabel Dodge Luhan House

Mabel Ganson Dodge (1879 - 1962), a married heiress from Buffalo, NY, held a salon for important left-wing intellectuals and activists in her Manhattan home. She went to Taos in 1916 and later married Native American Tony Luhan. They built a 22-room house as an artist colony and salon to attract visitors such as Georgia O'Keeffe, D.H. Lawrence, Ansel Adams, Paul Strand, Laura Gilpin, Willa Cather, Mary Austin and Jean Toomer. Dodge Luhan's four-volume autobiography details her life as a cultural activist. Now a bed and breakfast, the house is on the National Register of Historic Places.

TAOS

Millicent Rogers Museum including the Maria Martinez Family Collection

Millicent Rogers (1902 - 1953) was the granddaughter of a wealthy industrialist. She moved to Taos in 1947 and used her social standing to lobby for the protection of Native American cultural heritage. A great beauty and talented jewelry designer, she was also an art patron and collector. The Millicent Rogers Museum, in a renovated historic residence, exhibits Native American jewelry, ceramics, basketry, painting, sculpture, and textiles; Hispanic devotional art, Rio Grande weavings, colcha embroideries, and metalwork; and Anglo-European contemporary arts and crafts of Northern New Mexico.

Millicent Rogers

Maria Martinez

In 1984, the museum acquired the most important public collection in the United States of pottery by Maria Martinez. The Martinez - Da Family contributed many photographs, documents and memorabilia as well.
